

Walking in Your Fear

Standing at the crop circle, the Earth Oracle recalled, "It felt like the earth and the air and the wind had come together to create a design in the farmer's field to teach us about the consciousness of the planet."

CROP CIRCLE:

If you walk in fear, you will find courage at last, or at least. You will find in your path, beauty that was not there while you were standing still.

If you walk in your fear, you will find the rose, the bluebell, the crystal, the water, the food on your path, the person to give a hand, the animal to go upon its back.

If you stand in your place, you'll find nothing but the emptiness and thereby you will know nothing and be uncreated.

It is in your standing still you do your greatest harm.

It is in the walking forward that harm can be done to you, but you will not be a part of that harm, even though it may hurt you.
