Old Truths and New Truths

BEING:

Your world is full of old truths. They are no longer true. So you have to give up an old truth and begin to look for a new truth.

The hardest level of a new truth is the beginning— of being blank, the unknown.

So if it is unknown, how can it be true? You have to start giving up what is known and believe the unknown to be more powerful and more structured and more giving than the known. The unknown is always uncomfortable until you begin to walk the unknown and find that it can work. And that can take years. But that is what your world is beginning to do to you. Your planet is beginning to throw you all into an unknown.

How you used to solve problems is not working, is it? You are in the unknown. You can't create a known until the planet gives you its new truth. It is the planet that gives you the truths.

So your new truth is: the old truth is dying. There is no new truth yet, for the planet has not yet undone the old truth. Until it undoes the old truth, you will experience your truths as not working as well as you wish, or at all.

Those who carry the planet inside of them will have some of the new truths as those truths begin to appear. And they'll be simple. It usually is. But you'll struggle with the old truths until you can say it doesn't work, and then hit despair that nothing will work.

How hard is it for you to allow somebody you're close to, to change? Well, you're all close to your planet. Can you let it change and live each step with each change?

As you grow with each change, that will be the truth of that moment.
