

Callanish Stone Circle, Isle of Lewis, Scotland 1999

The Purpose of Wind

BEING:

Before there was anything, there was wind. Before fire, before water, before anything solid or physical, there was wind. Wind has always been the first component. It is always present. Of anything that carries life within it, wind is always a component. The currents in the wind match the currents in the oceans and match the currents in your bloodstream.

The purpose of wind is to carry information from one place to another. The purpose of wind is to carry seed, to carry color, sound. It carries everything from one place to another, even thought forms, even belief systems. It puts you on the same current with those people of similar thoughts. So when you wish to change who you are, it is quite important that you change your thoughts to be in a different current with other people, not only of this world but of all the other worlds also.

Be a seed. Your thought is a seed. It can go as far out in outer space as you want it to go, and on your planet also, for you are human and you are connected to a much deeper, larger part that has much more impact than you believe. Your impact is pretty enormous, even if you feel it never is.

© Donna Sarah Taylor